

Python Web Development

Python is commonly used for backend web development. Frameworks such as Flask and Django help developers build web applications quickly. Flask is lightweight while Django provides a full-featured architecture. APIs can also be built using FastAPI in Python.